

Turn London office market noise into a cited, decision-ready brief

The challenge is turning fragmented evidence into a defensible meeting position.

Fragmented evidence

Broker reports, market news and economic signals arrive in different formats and periods.

Decision risk

A headline rent or isolated deal can obscure the wider picture of demand, supply and vacancy.

A clearer position

Bring the takeaway, supporting sources and unresolved questions into the same conversation.

Rents / Vacancy / Leasing demand / New supply / Economic drivers

London focus: City, West End, Canary Wharf and Midtown / Fringe

Start with the decision you need to prepare for

Define the business question, the market and the period before assessing the evidence.

MONITOR

Reset priorities

What changed versus the previous quarter?

Identify material movements and decide what needs attention.

INVESTIGATE

Challenge a view

Is West End outperforming City?

Test the evidence for and against a view before adopting it.

PREPARE

Align the team

What are the key developments this month?

Agree the meeting position, open questions and what to watch.

Bring your sources. Ask your question. Get cited answers.

A question-led workflow turns accessible reports into a brief you can inspect.

Your team sets the question. The agent assembles evidence. People make the decision.

Source passages stay available for review; gaps remain visible in the answer.

See the takeaway first. Go deeper only when you need to.

Live example: do publishers disagree on City and West End prime rents?

RECORDED AGENT OUTPUT / EDITED EXCERPT

Savills reports West End average prime rent of £175.10 per sq ft for Q2 2026. Knight Frank's £185.00 figure is a Q4 2025 West End Core headline rent. Different periods and definitions mean these are not a like-for-like disagreement. [1] [2]

Run status: partial brief; no verified overall synthesis.

What this supports

Check definitions before treating different rent figures as conflicting evidence.

What remains open

Knight Frank's Q2 rent table was absent from the retrieved text. The comparison remains open.

Check the claim before it reaches the meeting

Trust comes from showing what can be compared, what conflicts and what remains unknown.

Comparable sources

Match the measure, location, units and period before comparing values.

Conflicting evidence

Keep competing reports visible. Do not average away differences in definitions or coverage.

Explicit uncertainty

Separate reported facts from interpretation. Flag missing evidence and qualify the conclusion.

Traceable claims

Follow citations to the publisher and inspect supporting passages, values and calculations.

Citation checks support review; the team still assesses source quality and business meaning.

A repeatable routine, with a human at the decision

Pilot one recurring meeting question and measure whether preparation becomes easier.

1 Refresh

Collect current evidence and establish the comparison baseline.

2 Review

Read the brief, challenge the key claim and discuss the gaps.

3 Decide

Agree the team position and what to watch; carry the cited brief forward.

Available in this PoC

On-demand research and refresh, evidence comparison, cited briefs and follow-up questions.

Defined scope

Accessible sources; human review. Scheduled alerts, private-data connectors and autonomous decisions are outside scope.

Success measure: time to a usable brief, time to verify a claim and value to the meeting.
