

What changed — and what does it mean for a lease?

Discover reports.

Bring rents, demand, supply and macro context into one research conversation, with the source trail attached.

BUSINESS QUESTION

Where is occupier demand strengthening, and could constrained quality supply change the timing or terms of our next leasing decision?

A recorded run, with its limits visible

ACTUAL MODEL ANSWER

Per the stored JLL 'Central London Office Market Dynamics Q2 2026' report, take-up reached 2.6 million sq.ft. in Q2 2026, up 15% quarter-on-quarter and above the 10-year average, led by a strong West End performance.

Implication: with take-up above its 10-year average while supply shrinks and the construction pipeline thins, occupiers with defined requirements may benefit from starting searches and committing earlier, as choice and negotiating leverage could diminish.

NEW REPORT

Discoveries establish coverage; they do not alone prove market movement.

REVISED CONTENT

Same URL, different checksum: retain both versions and source IDs.

COMPARABLE CHANGE

Match units, periods and definitions; calculate differences in code.

BUSINESS IMPLICATION

Qualify timing and supply risks; expose disagreement and collection gaps.

Implemented; full live readiness still needs verification

DELIVERED

- Tool-driven chat
- Semantic evidence
- Manual refresh + briefing
- Source versions + citations
- Explicit demo isolation

VERIFIED

- Automated grounding tests
- Deterministic evaluation
- Real model tool calls
- Real semantic retrieval
- Compose configuration

REMAINING BLOCKER

- Free host disk capacity and restore Docker health.
- Then verify Firecrawl search + scrape, full Compose startup and persistence.
